Informed Consent

Veterinary chiropractic care has not yet been recognized by the AVMA and is still considered as experimental (like veterinary acupuncture had been for years).

As with any medical procedure, no guarantees of cure are made or implied.

The client has the option to seek out another opinion and is encouraged to do so.

The treatment plan provided to the client will maximize the patient's success and it is up to the client to follow the advised care plan.

The client is advised to be under the care of a licensed veterinarian as nutritional deficiencies and other underlying disease or injury may hinder the success of the patient. The veterinarian may require a complete medical work up, blood tests, or radiography.
